

Climate Protection doesn't allow any borders

Resolution from Brandenburg and Poland to Copenhagen

We are deeply concerned by the numbers and scenarios of the UN-Climate Report. Global warming and its consequences are irreversible they cannot be stopped anymore, but can be limited.

We live in an area of the world with the highest carbon footprint per citizen. We are not proud of this fact.

Here, energy companies plan to continue coalmining on both sides of the river Neiße. They want to resettle villages, destroy landscapes, use carbon capture and storage, and burden future generations with the devastating side effects.

We do not believe that burning brown coal is a sustainable economic source for us or the world. This type of energy is very irresponsible and has to be stopped in medium term.

There is no alternative to an energy supply that is based on renewable energies.

Today we meet at the Neiße between Germany and Poland, because there is no limit to climate protection. We want to provide future generations with a future worth living and like to offer a region worth living.

Therefore, we expect the participants at the conference in Copenhagen to stand up to their responsibility and to agree upon binding, ambitious, and brave steps for the rescue of our planet beyond state borders. We need guidelines that we can be proud of.
